GUIDE TO THE INTER-AMERICAN DEVELOPMENT BANK

MONTHLY OPERATIONAL SUMMARY

Introduction

This Monthly Operational Summary (MOS) contains information on loan and technical cooperation projects included in the Inter-American Development Bank's (IDB's) official pipeline.

The summary covers the following information for each project: sector of activity, probable executing agency and its address, estimated amount of IDB financing, project description, estimated total cost, anticipated procurement opportunities and processing stage. Countries are presented alphabetically and sectors are listed alphabetically within each country. Regional projects are presented alphabetically within the country entries. All amounts are expressed in terms of US dollars.

Information in the summary is updated monthly. Project entries are removed when they are approved by the Bank's Board of Executive Directors or when a decision is reached not to proceed with their processing.

A brochure explaining the procedures governing procurement under IDB loans, including international competitive bidding, is available in English, French, Portuguese and Spanish from the Publications Section, Office of External Relations, Inter-American Development Bank, 1300 New York Ave., NW, Washington, DC 20577, USA. Requests for information on business opportunities from the projects listed should be addressed directly to the executing agency.

Processing Stages

The processing stages reflect phases of the IDB's project cycle. Those stages are described below:

Identification Stage: It starts with an agreement between the Bank and a borrowing member country on an operational strategy and definition of investment priorities that the Bank aims to pursue to support the country's development needs. Such agreement is the result of the Bank's Country Programming Process, which is based on a continuous dialogue and programming exercise between the IDB and the borrowing country. The identified projects are expected to be consistent with both the country's and the Bank's priority sectors of activity. A project profile, containing a very brief and preliminary description of the main objectives, possible components and issues involving the operation, is prepared for each identified project. The identification stage ends with the formal inclusion of those identified projects in the official Operative Program (pipeline) of the Bank, or inventory of projects, after the project profile is approved by the Bank's Programming Committee. During this stage, identification missions by IDB personnel may occur to further the conceptualization and development of the project. Opportunities for consulting services may already be indicated in the MOS. In some cases, some preliminary mention of possible acquisition of goods and contracting of civil works may also be made.

Preparation Stage: It starts with the approval of a second and more developed project profile by the Bank's Loan Committee. During this stage, a further development of the operation's objectives, components, costs, justification, issues and institutional framework for its execution takes place. Although this stage is primarily carried out by the borrower, the Bank may assist with technical and institutional advice and financing of technical cooperation needs. The stage ends with the borrower's formal presentation of the basic documentation supporting its loan application to the Bank. During this stage, Bank orientation missions occur. Possible procurement opportunities are better identified and defined. Consultants may be required to help the borrower with the preparation of studies and basic project documentation required by the Bank.

Analysis Stage: This stage starts with an analysis mission to discuss with the borrowing country's authorities the contents of the documentation provided to the Bank to support the loan application. The mission is followed by preliminary negotiations of the possible loan conditions with those authorities. During this stage, a Bank designated Project Team conducts in-depth analyses of the technical, financial, legal, institutional, socioeconomic and environmental aspects of the proposed operation. The stage culminates with the Project Team's preparation of a Project Report for presentation to the Bank's Loan Committee. This phase may include contracting of consulting services for specific short-term studies to complement the Bank's efforts in the operation appraisal. In addition, a more precise description of the necessary goods and equipment to be acquired for the project's execution may be available.

Final Approval Stage: It starts with the consideration of the Project Report by the Loan Committee. If necessary, the Bank and the borrower conduct their final negotiations to determine the terms and conditions of the loan. A final document called a "Loan Proposal" is prepared. The stage ends with the consideration and approval of the Loan Proposal by the Bank's Board of Executive Directors. The Loan Proposal presents the precise description of the basic aspects regarding the project's procurement opportunities, including consulting services, acquisition of goods and equipment and/or civil works. Once the operation is approved by the Board, a Loan Contract is signed by the borrower's authorities and the Bank's President. Execution of the project may begin within a few months, under the responsibility of the borrowing country's designated executing agency. General procurement notices will appear in Development Business.
